The victim, a female age 7, was sexually molested by her mother's boyfriend when she lived with her mother in another state. Benefits were denied and a referral made to the other state's program.

Benefits Denied - Injuries were a result of a traffic accident.

The victim, a female age 20, was crossing the street. The offender passed a car in front of him and struck the claimant. Benefits were denied since the offender was not committing a Title 45 crime with the mental state of purposely, that is the offender did not want to injure or kill the victim. The offender was charged with several traffic violations.

Benefits Denied - Claim was not filed within one year.

The victim, a male age 20, had complained about the offender's poor work to the offender and the foreman. The offender made threats to beat the victim up. The victim was going home after work. He usually car pooled with the offender but the offender was not at the car. The victim saw the offender down the road so he stopped. The offender struck him. The victim filed his claim more than a year later. His reasons for not filing within the one year limit were that the offender was supposed to pay the expenses and did not and he did not know about the program. Benefits were denied since neither reason was good cause to extend the one year limit on filing a claim.

Benefits Denied - The claimant and offender were residing together, the claimant is the spouse of the offender and there was no interest of justice to award benefits.

The victim, a male age 11 when the claim was filed, was sexually molested by his step-grandfather. The mother, the claimant, knew about the molestations in December, 1986 but no report was made to law enforcement until January, 1988 and the claim was not filed until September, 1989. The claimant stated she did not report to law enforcement because she had not self esteem and had to trust her husband's judgment. She did not file a claim because she did not know it had to be filed and she wanted time to think it over before filing. In addition, no prosecution was ever done since the family wanted to handle it themselves.

The claimant appealed the denial. An informal hearing by telephone conference call was held. The claimant could not be reached for the informal hearing. Witnesses gave evidence. The denial was upheld.
